THE PUBLICATIONS REGISTERED IN THE DIFFERENT PROVINCES

DURING

THE YEAR 1877.

MADRAS.

From the HON. D. F. CARMICHAEL, Chief Secretary to the Government of Fort St. George, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department, No. 321, dated 29th June 1878.

Referring to the Resolution of the Government of India, No. 10-707, dated 26th April 1875, and your letter No. 19-1150, of the 13th June 1877, I am directed to forward the Review and Analysis of Publications registered in this Presidency under Act XXV of 1867, during the year 1877.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of Madras, No. 320, dated 29th June 1878.

Read the following paper :—

From V. KRISTNAMA CHARIAR, Registrar of Books, to the Director of Public Instruction, dated Madras, 7th June 1878, No. 25.

I have the honor to submit, for the information of the Government of India, the following brief review and analysis, prepared in the prescribed form, of the publications registered in the Madras Presidency under Act XXV of 1867, during the year ended the 31st December 1877.

2. During the period under review there were received for registration 636 publications, and the following is a comparative statement of the number of works classified under the general heads of Books, Pamphlets, Periodicals and Miscellaneous for the last two years :—

	1876.	1877.
Books ... ..	378	288
Pamphlets ... ..	368	274
Periodicals ... ..	70	70
Miscellaneous ... ..	7	4
TOTAL ... ..	823	636

It will be observed that the year under report has not been one of increased activity and expansion in regard to numbers, Printing Presses having suffered from the effects of the famine and general distress much the same as the Educational Institutions of the Presidency. Had it not been for this adverse circumstance, the most important items of Books and Pamphlets would have lost but little ground.

3. The decrease in the total number of works registered may, however, be said to be counterbalanced by the fact that it is entirely under the head of mere re-prints of old books, and by the satisfactory advance made in the number of "Original works" and "Translations,"

		1876.	1877.
Original Works	...	.. 195	186

chiefly in the vernacular languages of the Presidency, as shown in the marginal entry. This is a significant result, showing, as I remarked more than once before, signs of a growing inclination on the part of publishers to leave their old groove and the comparatively easy occupation of simply re-producing old Authors, and indicates a change for the better in the direction of literary effort in the vernacular language of the Presidency, if the change can be regarded as permanent.

4. Distributed, again, according to the languages of the publications, the proportion of books in the European languages is found to be about 14 per cent. of the total number; that for the works in the vernacular languages of the Presidency is 69½ per cent., and in oriental classics 11 per cent., while the remaining 5½ per cent. are bi-lingual or polyglot publications. Of the vernacular works in which improvement or falling off, so far as it can be gauged by the mere standard of numbers, shows the extent of speculation among the printers, and literary activity among the people, 206 are in Tamil, 91 in Telugu, 105 in Malayalam, 22 in Canarese and 18 in Hindustani, the most striking feature being the continued increase in the number of Malayalam works, though not of a high order of merit. A short story in Mahratta and a primer in the Syrian language, also registered during the year, are too insignificant to deserve special mention.

It is also worthy of remark that the total number of publications in Sanscrit and the two classical languages of the Mussulmen has slightly increased, there being 75 works against 67 of the previous year, and some of them are mixed with vernacular explanations so as to get at the millions.

5. A further classification of the publications with reference to their subject-matter is shown in the first table in the annexed analysis; and I proceed now to notice briefly the more prominent publications under the various heads:—

Biography.—Of biography proper, which goes far to educate a people to higher aspirations, there is little in the living vernaculars, if we leave out the legendary and poetical accounts. Among the works of the year, therefore, the Life of Lord Clive, in Telugu, based on Macaulay's Essay on the subject, and the Life of Faraday—the Blacksmith's son—in Tamil, are both worthy of mention as being just the germs of better things. The English work under this head is but a re-print of the lives of Julius Cæsar and Augustus Cæsar as contained in Plutarch's Lives and the Encyclopædia Metropolitana, and prescribed for the University Examinations.

The Drama is apparently acquiring an increasing popularity, and some four out of the twelve works registered are of recent growth. One of these is a Tamil drama entitled the "Pratāpachandra Villasam," based on the supposed adventures of a Zemindar's son who was educated and brought up in Madras during the time of Lord Mayo, and who was duped into dangerous paths for a time by wicked and intemperate associates, on his return to his own estate, but who finally vindicated his character by avoiding bad company. This play, a great part of which is in Tamil verse and is set to music on the native plan, deserves mention as the production of a Hindu Graduate of the Madras University. "Indra Sabha" is a Hindustani drama composed chiefly in the form of songs and odes adapted to the stage and illustrated with pictorial sketches, and is a popular publication, and the play has been acted frequently in the Mahomedan theatres in Madras. The English work in this group under the title of "Rediviva" is a considerably altered and improved edition of an original allegory in the form of a melodrama in which reason, the spirit of revolution, the Penal Code, misrule, ignorance, intrigue, litigation, over-legislation and over-taxation and like matters which engross public attention now-a-days are delineated in an interesting manner by the skilful pen of one of our English Judges and an enlightened patron of learning in Madras.

Fiction.—There are twenty-one publications under this head this year, and with a few exceptions they are merely re-publications of old popular stories. The exceptions are the Tamil translations of Johnson's Rasselas brought out by the Educational Department, and of Lamb's Tales of King Lear, and Romeo and Juliet, and Ratnavali, an Indian Tale, newly composed from one of the Sanscrit dramas—all these being the publications of the School Book and Vernacular Literature Society, and the Tamil version of the well-known Urdu tale of Chardervish, or Four Fakeers, published for the use of Labbay readers.

History.—Three of the publications under this head are Manuals of Indian History intended for the use of schools. The fourth, however, is of a different character, being an abridged History of the Ottoman Empire, written in Hindustani from the Moslem stand-point, and its appearance at the present moment is evidence of the deep sympathy felt for Turkey by the Mahomedan population of Madras in the war declared against her by Russia. It is a voluminous history under the title of Feroz Nama-i-Turk, excellently lithographed and copiously illustrated regardless of expense, and sold at the price of 5 rupees a copy, which suggests a fair demand for it, and shows what can be done by the Mahomedan Press in a department of literature in which the faithful are interested, and when they are awakened by some extraordinary event from sleep and silence.

Language.—This head comprises primers, reading books, vocabularies and glossaries, works on grammar, dictionaries, lexicons and keys and guides to translation and composition, besides the re-prints of essays and selections from prose Authors prescribed for examinations in languages.

and the following works deserve mention: Mr. Garthwaite's new Anglo-Vernacular Primers forming the first of a new series of Madras School Readers prepared by order of Government, and "Teacher's Hand Book to the English Primer" by the same Author, being notes of lessons for the use of Native teachers communicating step by step an elementary knowledge of English and as much of the primary constructions of the English language that differ from corresponding ones in the vernacular as shall enable the pupil to translate into easy sentences from either language into the other. These new school books, constructed scientifically and on a rational method, so as to prevent "cram," promise to be a useful aid to the improvement of English teaching in elementary schools and classes. Dr. Bower's edition of the valuable introduction to the standard work of Pavanandi on Tamil Grammar, named the "Nannul," with an English translation of the text and notes for the use of Undergraduates, and "Paribhasha Sékhara," a well-known text-book in Sanscrit Grammar nearly two centuries old now printed for the first time in this part of India with a recent commentary, also deserve special mention. Among the new lexicons may be noticed the "Laghu Sabdhārtha Sarvasva," being the first volume of a comprehensive Sanscrit Dictionary, with Sanscrit explanations and quotations; "Laghu Sangraha," which is a collection of Sanscrit words with their meanings in Telugu, indicating, as the title implies, the gender of each noun—a point of grammar somewhat perplexing to ordinary readers to decide upon the Sanscrit; "Samuscrutāndra Rupa Rahasya Darsam," or the Mirror of Sanscrit and Telugu words, being a lexicon of 3,630 Sanscrit and Telugu words having the same meaning, but slightly differing in spelling and form; and "Vinó-darasa Manjari," a rare Tamil book of literary essays and well-written papers on miscellaneous subjects. The rest are smaller works of a semi-classic kind; and the publication of such linguistic knowledge emanating from private Native Presses and speculating publishers, unaided by the State or other extraneous agency, is one of the signs of the healthy influence which the Vernacular Press is exercising in Southern India.

Law.—The number of law books is steadily increasing, and the following may be noticed as the most important of those entered in the catalogues of the year:—A Digest of the Hindu Law, as administered in the Courts of the Madras Presidency, presenting the doctrines of Hindu Law in a series of short, distinct and carefully worded propositions, to help forward the codification of the law in future, with a preface to the Digest by Mr. Cunningham urging the importance of reforming the old usages and practices which are remote from the modern Hindu's life. Another essay entitled "A view of the Hindu Law as administered by the High Court of Judicature in Madras" by Mr. J. H. Nelson, who considers it absurd and unjust to supply what is styled the "Hindu Law" to the great bulk of the Tamils and Telugus of Southern India, whose usages and customs are altogether different from those "judicially recognized" under the Sanscrit Law, and urges, therefore, even more radical reforms than Mr. Cunningham in the present administration of Hindu Law. Mr. Mitchell's Digest of "Indian Law Reports for 1876" supplying all that is most essential and important in the year's reports. Mr. H. J. Stokes' "Rent Recovery Act," illustrated by appending to the Rulings of the High Court the proper sections and by suitable references and quotations from the decisions on the cognate law in Bengal, and also indicating where the law stands in need of amendment. Mr. Weir's Digest of Rules, and Rulings of the High Court in Criminal Cases passed according to the provisions of the new Code of Criminal Procedure, being essentially a revision and continuation of Mr. Wigram's Digest. "The Law of Landlord and Tenant for the Mofussal," defining the process to be taken for the recovery of the land-rent throughout the Presidency. "Problems of Mahomedan Law of Inheritance," being a collection of problems selected mostly from the Precedents of Inheritance contained in Macnaughten's Principles of Mahomedan Law. "The Revenue Refresher" by a Native Revenue Officer, intended as a guide to the study of the Revenue Laws and Regulations of the Madras Presidency, and the Standing Orders bearing upon them. The most important of the re-prints under this head are a completely revised edition of "Norton's Law of Evidence applicable to India," adapted to the Evidence Act of 1872, with fresh matter introduced to suit present circumstances and to bring the law up to date. "Collett's Manual of the Law of Torts and Measures of Damages, re-edited with reference to all the decisions bearing upon the subject and to several recent enactments"; and "Dhayabhaga Koumudi" or the Hindu Law of Inheritance in Sanscrit, with a clear Telugu paraphrase of the Sanscrit text.

In Medicine, the year has apparently produced no new work, those appearing under this head being all based on the old Hindu and Mussulman systems, written in Sanscrit, Malayalam, Arabic, &c., with modern commentaries in the vernacular languages. Of these, Part IV of Ashtanga, a Sanscrit medical work with Malayalam explanation accompanying each verse, may perhaps be mentioned as an important work.

Miscellaneous.—Nearly a sixth of the total number of publications is included under this comprehensive head, and the works are of a miscellaneous character and of various sizes and degrees of merit. The most notable of these are Dr. Ratton's "Hand Book of Common Salt" being a practical guide to salt manufacture, with Indian illustrations, avoiding rigid scientific terms and the use of Indian technicalities as much as possible, and bringing together into fit shape for study the scattered fragments of historical and other useful information on the subject of common salt; "The Planter's Manual," illustrated by lithographic plates, on coffee-planting, and on the propagation and culture of medical cinchonas; Addis' "Single-rail Railway," being a collection of reports and opinions on the merits of Mr. Addis' arrangement of a single-rail tramway and an Indian bullock-cart and its working near Bombay. A progressively arranged text-book on Hindu music in Telugu by Singra-charlu, Head Master of Patchiappa's Girls' School, published in three parts: the first treating of musical sounds and their simple combinations, with exercises; the second containing the more advanced lessons on the subject, with specimens of music; and the third presenting a series of progressive lessons touching on the theory of musical sounds and the principles of Hindu music. Asvasastra in Tamil, dealing with the peculiarities of breed and color, merits and defects and diseases of horses, and other horned cattle, and remedies for the same, and therefore containing information both practical and useful; and a Manual in Canarese of cattle-breeding and management and treatment of diseases, to which are added medicines for horses and sheep, all intended to benefit the agricultural classes of the Canarese country. Several elementary geographies of districts and countries, and the Tamil and Telugu versions of Mr. Duncan's Introduction to the Geography of the World, are also entered under this head as they belong to no other group. "Chitraratanakaram" or Riddles in rhyme, each affording its own solution when read backwards, and small Mussulman books on the interpretation of dreams also appear in this collection, but they are of no value when compared with the cheap series of instructive and amusing papers derived from European sources and published for the people by the School Book and Vernacular Literature Society which are also included under this head.

Among the remainder there are several numbers of literary, educational and religious Periodicals, Magazines and Law Journals and Miscellanies, and which the Press both in the Presidency town and outlying districts throw off, besides books and newspapers. Of these periodical publications, two are in English, four in Tamil, two in Telugu, one in Malayalam, and two in Canarese. These contain in imitation of the periodical literature of Europe, articles on various subjects, literary, scientific and religious, stories, criticism, anecdotes and news, besides papers on educational and legal topics and other secular and amusing matter, and some of them are brought out with excellent pictorial illustrations. The vernacular periodicals especially must be doing a considerable amount of good among the people by creating and gratifying a desire for useful information and by providing the elements of healthy and recreative reading at a small cost for both the old and the young in the country, besides indirectly serving as the basis for a new kind of popular literature suited to the altered civilization of the present century and the wants of the rising generation, and set more or less skilfully in the living languages of the Presidency, some of which are strong vernaculars capable of great development.

Poetry.—A great deal of the poetry being connected with religion, it is often found difficult to separate the poetical from religious works. The majority of the publications of the year comprised in this group are poems varying in length and merit, didactic verses, panegyrics, love rhymes and lyrics, bazaar songs and ballads, such as float from mouth to mouth among the people. A new poem from the pen of a Brahmin Pandit welcoming the title of Empress of India assumed by the Queen, and dwelling on the advantages derived by India from the British rule, in Sanscrit and Telugu with English translation, are worthy of note, while among the older poems hitherto unpublished and even unknown, perhaps, beyond Southern India, special mention is due to the following—

(1.) "Hamsa Sandésam" a poem on the model of Kalidasa's Mégha Sandésam, or cloud messenger, in which the messenger is a Hamsa bird between the human soul and the Creator;

(2.) "Subhashita Nivi" or a girdle of good words, which is a rare string of ethical verses;

(3.) The first six cantos of an epic poem entitled the "Yádavabhyodayam" composed on the life of Krishna on the plan of Kalidas's and other classical poems of Upper India—all these three being the Sanscrit poems by Védánta Chárya, and the last mentioned poem printed with the able commentary of his contemporary Appia Dieshit, both of whom flourished at Conjeveram some three centuries ago ;

(4.) "Sri Bhagavata Kirtana" or Tamil lyrics, based on the story of the life of Krishna as told in the tenth book of the Bhagavatam, and first sung in the Tamil country some fifty years ago, and ever since very popular there.

Politics.—As a rule, books and pamphlets on political subjects are rare in this part of India, and this item would be but a blank this year, but for the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi, which has brought to the front an anonymous pamphlet in English professing to deal with the question, "What is the form of Government that India should obtain at the hands of England?" and to consider the view that a Hindu should take of the British power in India and the legitimate aspirations he should entertain. The other book in this group is but a new edition of a Telugu work on Zemindari administration, remarkable as having emanated from one of the Zemindars in the Northern Circars.

In Philosophy there are two Tamil works entered, one of which apparently hitherto unpublished, is "Paribhāsha Tirattu" ascribed to Agastya, and treating partly of the Yoga system of Hindū philosophy, and partly of alchemy and medicine. The other is an old standard work said to be translated from the Sanscrit work of the same name and contains the doctrines of Vedantism as propounded by the sage Vasishtha to Rama, and illustrated by various legends.

Religion.—This head comprises the most numerous entries amounting to 40 per cent. of the total for the year. Hinduism, as might be expected, is represented by the largest number of works, viz., 113, and the more distinguished of these are the "Arshēya Brāhmaṇam," a vedic work in the Roman character by Dr. A. C. Burnell, being a kind of catalogue of the Sāma Vēda chants or index of contents in the order of the Sanscrit text edited, together with extracts from the comments of Sāyana, &c., and published with a useful introduction and index of words, all possessing a philological as well as religious interest; the series of standard Purāṇas or Sanscrit legends of old; "Gita Govinda" or Song of Songs, by the celebrated Jayadeva, with a literal paraphrase, and "Govinda Manjari," otherwise called Bhajagovindam, by Sankara Charya, with a Telugu metrical translation—both Sanscrit works of high antiquity; and the new translations of Bhagavatam and Vālmīki Rāmāyanam in Tamil, illustrated with lithograph plates. This last in particular rendered faithfully from Vālmiki, canto by canto, is a valuable contribution to the Tamil prose literature of the period,* brought out with colored illustrations as a serial publication by the proprietor of a Native Press with the best literary aid available in Madras, to supply a long-admitted want, and shows, considering the large share of popular favor it has secured on the appearance of the first part or two, what sort of literary wares are sought by the people in these practical days, how general the desire is for popularizing the contents of the poetical literature of the past, and re-setting them in a style suited to the taste of the people and to the normal flow of their ideas, and what scope there is for the extended cultivation of such a strong and superior vernacular as Tamil, and for the development of a wish for more exact knowledge which may bear fruit in the next, if not in the present generation.

Christianity next claims 95 publications, either explaining or advocating Christian doctrines, or attacking the other religions of the country. "Gruha Dharmodayam," a Telugu translation of a Tamil or English work on the religious duties and social obligations of young Christians, is worthy of mention as a new publication in this group; and the large number of cheap tracts and religious and instructive stories in the vernacular language issued by the Missionary Societies is typical of the Missionary mode of working the Press so as to reach and move the masses. Next comes Mahomedanism with 47 or just half the number of Christian works and call for no remarks, as they are mostly re-prints of old works on Mahomedan traditions, prayers, religious observances, dirges and anti-Wahabi tracts. A sketch of Mahomed and his mission, in Malayalam prose, is worthy of note as the production of a native of Malabar, apparently intended for Mopla readers in that province. There is also a book on Jainism, entitled Meru Mandara Purana, dealing with the principles of the Jaina sect.

Science (Mathematical and Mechanical).—With one exception, perhaps, the books in this group are all small school books, and therefore call for no particular notice here. The exceptional work is a book of Tables for finding the amount of assessment on acres and cents, instalments of the land revenue and village cess, inam, quit-rent, and the like, useful to village officials and other people in the rural districts.

Science (Natural and other).—No new work of any importance has appeared excepting a small book of problems in Physics with model solutions and examples for schools. Among the old Hindu scientific books now printed for the first time, there is a rare work about 2000 years old, entitled the "Jalārgala Sastram" which is occupied in determining the quality of soils or beds below whose surface water springs can be found, the depths at which such natural springs are likely to occur, the quality of water, the mode of digging wells and reservoirs, and like matters. This work has been apparently resuscitated under the pressure of the recent water famine in Madras. The year has also produced several of the standard astrological works and others on divination, augury, &c., usually included under this head. Among these, Bhīmésvara Ullamudayan in Tamil is a standard work, and two other little tracts in verse may be mentioned more on account of their curious contents than their scientific value. Their names are respectively "Tummi Núl" and "Tudi Núl," the former being a tract on augury derived from the sound of one's sneeze, the cries or sounds from the crow, the owl and the ass, the fall of a lizard on one's person, and the like; and the latter on divination by the sudden involuntary motions or slightly convulsive shakes of one's limbs, and the omens thence derived as to a variety of matters.

Travels and Voyages are represented by an ornate description in Telugu prose of the progress of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales through this country, and "Visvagunadarsa" an adaptation in Telugu verse of a Sanscrit work of the same name meaning a "Kaleidoscope" in which various holy shrines and rivers, persons, places and things are both praised and abused by two imaginary travellers, the one always finding fault with what the other praises.

6. Classified in a different way as in the last table of the annexed Analysis, 115, or more than a fifth, of the total number of registered publications are found to be Educational and the remaining 521 are Non-educational works appertaining to the class of general literature mainly in the classical and vernacular languages of the country.

7. During the year under report the Copyrights of 71 books have been registered, including one publication of the Educational Department. Whenever a book is sent to me for simple registration with the words "Copyright registered" printed on it, or with a similar formula, without any application to register such right, I advise the proprietor to have his proprietary right formally registered, reminding him of the danger of neglecting to secure the same; and I believe that all Printers are periodically warned by the Commissioner of Police and other local authorities of the liabilities of such as are inattentive to the provisions of the Act.

P.S.—I request to be furnished with the blue books containing the reports on publications registered in the several provinces of British India during the years 1875 and 1876, which I have not yet received. but which I believe have already been issued.

No. 2351, dated 18th June 1878.

Endorsed by Director of Public Instruction, Madras.

Submitted to Government.

ORDER THEREON by the Madras Government.

Ordered that the Review and Analysis of Publications registered in this Presidency under Act XXV of 1867, during the year 1877, be forwarded to the Government of India.

BOMBAY.

From C. GONNE, Esq., Acting Chief Secretary to Government, Bombay, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department, No. 574, dated Educational Department, Bombay Castle, the 29th April 1878.

I am directed to forward herewith, for submission to the Government of India, copy of a report on the Literature of the Bombay Presidency for the year 1877, and of its accompaniment, prepared in accordance with the orders contained in the Resolution of Government of India, No. 4238 of 20th September 1870.

From KRISHNA SHASTRI CHITLONKER, Esq., Reporter on the Native Press, to the Director of Public Instruction, Poona, No. 93, dated Poona, the 30th March 1878.

I have the honour to submit, in conformity with the instructions contained in the Government of India's Resolution No. 10—707, dated the 26th April 1875, a brief review and an analysis of the publications registered in the quarterly official catalogues of the year 1877.

2. The total number of works catalogued during the year under report is 832, that is, only one publication more than were registered in the last year. These 832 works may be first divided as follows :—

Books	...	...	...	...	582
Pamphlets	...	...	...	...	20
Periodicals	...	...	...	...	198
Miscellaneous	...	...	...	...	32
TOTAL				...	832

3. They may again be divided as Oriental and European works, the former comprising by far the greater number of the publications, namely, those written wholly or partly in the Oriental languages, such as the vernaculars of India, and the sacred languages of the indigenous and naturalized foreign races living in this country. The latter class is represented by a comparatively few English and only one Portuguese work. The result of this second classification is given below :—

Oriental Books	...	...	...	...	722
European	...	...	...	...	110
TOTAL				...	832

4. The following abstract shows the total number of books registered in the different languages under the heads Original Works, Translations, and Republications.

5. Among the 109 English publications given in the above statement, there are several numbers of different journals of antiquarian, literary and sectarian interests, some official reports, some volumes of reference, such as diaries, calendars, different calculators useful to the people of business, and a few works of a literary character and of general interest. Among these last the following works may be more particularly mentioned.

6. "Transactions of the Literary Society of Bombay with engravings, in three volumes," edited by the Honourable Ráw Sáheb Vishwanáth Náráyan Mandlik, is a re-print of the papers read by the members of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society in its earliest days on literary, scientific, antiquarian and miscellaneous subjects. The re-publication is very useful to those who take an interest in the study of the antiquities and other subjects of India; and the usefulness of the re-print is enhanced by notes by the editor at the end of each paper, showing "how the subject-matter thereof stands at the present day." "The Church of Thibet and the historical analogies of Buddhism and Christianity," is a re-print of an able and erudite lecture delivered by Mr. Wordsworth, the Principal of the Elphinstone College, in a meeting of the Students' Literary Society, giving an historical analysis of one of the most widely professed religions in the world, and tracing out analogies between its history and the history of another religion, which has also spread as widely over the world through persuasion and not through force. Another work I would particularly notice here is the "Prize essay on the reciprocal influence of European and Mahomedan civilization during the period of the Khalifs and at the present time," by Professor E. Rehatsek. The essay contains much useful and very interesting information about the Mahomedan civilization. "A Revenue Manual of the British Empire in India; being an abstract of the evidence received by the East India Finance Committee on the various items of the British Indian Revenue, supplemented by the information contained in the latest Administration Reports," by Ráw Báhádur Mahádew Gowind Ránade, M.A., is an able and accurate analysis, and will be very valuable as a book of reference to those who may wish to study the subject of the British Indian Revenue. "Free trade and protection from an Indian point of view. A paper read at the Sassoon Mechanics' Institute on the 29th March 1877," by Káshináth Trimbak Telang, M.A., LL.B., is a pamphlet in defence of protective duties on foreign goods as a temporary measure under certain conditions, and replying to arguments usually used by the advocates of free-trade principle against protection. The pamphlet is very able and clear, and forcible and modest in expression.

7. The one Portuguese book is of a sectarian character, calling for no special remark.

8. I now beg to proceed to notice Oriental works registered during the year under review. They appear in one or two or more languages. The Presidency has four great vernaculars—Maráthi, Gujaráti, Canarese, and Sindi. Hindustáni is also used by a considerable portion of the population as its vernacular in its two forms, respectively called Hindi and Urdu. Books in these living languages are given collectively in the fourth column in the forms appended to this report. The population also being composed of different races and professing different religions, there are several sacred and classical languages, such as Sanskrit, Mágadhi, Arabic, Persian, Zend and Pehlavi. In all these dead languages books are issued more or less every year. The works appearing in these old tongues are given in the fifth column of the same appendix at the end of this report.

9. The orders of the Government of India, referred to in para. 1, require the publications catalogued during the year under report to be divided, firstly, as originals, translations and re-productions; secondly, according to the object for which they are written, that is, as educational and non-educational; thirdly, according to the languages in which they are written; and, lastly, according to their subject-matter as biographies, dramas, fictions, &c. This year there are altogether 722 Oriental publications; of these, 349, that is, about 48 per cent., are original; 50, or nearly 7 per cent., are translations; and 323, or about 44½ per cent., are re-prints. Again, of this above total 722, 101, or about 14 per cent., are educational publications; while the remaining 621, or about 86 per cent., are non-educational. Again classified according to the languages, the Maráthi, as is usual, bears the largest proportion, that is, 257 out of the total number of the Oriental works, or about 35½ per cent. are Maráthi publications. Next to Maráthi comes its great rival Gujaráti, which counts 209 works, or nearly 29 per cent. of the total. Thus the two great vernaculars of the Presidency, Maráthi and Gujaráti, absorb between them about two-thirds of the grand total of the Oriental publications. That the populations speaking the remaining vernaculars are still very backward in education and literary activity is a fact which comes prominently forward year after year in these annual analyses ever since they began to be prepared and officially submitted to Government. The publications in the Canarese and in the Sindi number this year only 7 and 6, respectively, that is, even hardly one per cent.; and even of these half are re-prints.

The Hindi and the Urdu, the two forms of the Hindustani, respectively count 22 and 23 works, or about three per cent. of the total. Of these also, 10 in the former and 16 in the latter are mere re-prints. The proportion which the publications appearing in the classical languages bear to the grand total is very small, being little less than 9 per cent. Again, of these 62 classical works, 49, or little less than 7 per cent., are purely Sanskrit works, 8 Persian and 5 Arabic. Almost all these classical publications, as may be expected, are re-prints of the old works. The publications appearing in more than one language number 135, or 18½ per cent. of the grand total.

10. With these few remarks of a general character, I beg to review more particularly, but briefly, such publications in the collection as appear to deserve or call for a special remark, in the order of the headings in which they are divided according to their subject-matter.

11. Biography.—Only four works are registered under this head. Two of them are in Maráthi and two in Gujaráti. Of the two former one is a re-print of the legendary account of Tukaram, the famous poet and saint of Maharástra. The other is a biographical sketch of Bápu Gokhle, a brave Brahman general of Bajiraw Raghunath, the last Peshwa. This rather indifferent work calls for notice only on account of the offensive remarks in which the author now and then indulges quite gratuitously on the British Government and its policy. Of the two Gujaráti works, one is a re-print of an old school-book, and the other is a small laudatory account of the late Sir Jamsetjee, the second Pársi Baronet.

12. Dramá.—There are fourteen publications registered under this head. Of these twelve are in Maráthi, one in Gujaráti and one in Hindi. Among these only two deserve a special mention. One describes some of the events of Peshwa Mádhavráw the elder, one of the wise and brave Peshwas whose promising career was suddenly cut short by an untimely death. The dramatist gives a very pathetic account of the death-bed of the prince, and of the solemn rite of sati performed by his young, beautiful and chaste wife Ramabai. The story in the other drama, "Jayapal" is an adaptation of the tale of Joseph from the Old Testament. Both these dramas, though short, are written in a very attractive style, and are deservedly popular. The Gujaráti drama, entitled "Vidyá Vijayá Náatak," is also a creditable performance, giving a readable story, having for its object the introduction of certain social reforms in the treatment of women. The remaining works are based on mythological stories, and are very indifferent productions from a literary point of view.

13. Fiction.—The head has put under it forty-three publications, fifteen of these are Maráthi, sixteen Gujaráti, eight Urdu, three Persian and one Sanskrit. They are of various sizes and merits. Many of these are re-prints of the well-known popular fables, such as the Vítál Panchawishi, or the twenty-five stories of the demon Wetál; the Shuk Baháttari, or the seventy-two tales by the parrot; the Bag-o-Báhár, the Æsop's fables, the Arabian Nights, &c.

14. History.—There are only twelve volumes under this head this year. Of these five are in Maráthi, four in Gujaráti, one in Canarese, one in Urdu, and one in Persian.

The majority of the publications comprised under this head is generally elementary school manuals; but the same is not the case this mong the Maráthi works there is a small history of the French, compiled from some English authors. Though the author's are mere echos of the English authors of a particular school, may be regarded as a good literary attempt, and deserves the merit the Educational Department has given him. "Bimba" or the story of king Bimba, is a re-print of an old chronicle, a curious mixture of mythology, tradition, and some true "Aitihásik Goshti," or historical anecdotes, is a short but a good collection of anecdotes connected with the history of the as. All the Gujaráti and Canarese publications are short school-books needing no special notice. The Urdu work entitled "Tárikh-e-Shám," or the history of the Turkish empire, is a history of that from the commencement to the present time. The circumstances render such a history interesting at present are too obvious to be mentioned here. The Persian book, entitled "Durreh," or the fine history of Nádir, is a history of Nádirsháh, one and powerful old kings of Persia.

Language.—This important head comprises sixty-two publications of various sizes and merits. Of these, thirty-one are in Maráthi, Gujaráti, ten in Sanskrit, or in Sanskrit and English, Sanskrit and Maráthi, four in Hindustáni, three in Sindhi, Persian, one in Canarese, and one in Zend, English, and Gujaráti. These publications are school-books, such as re-prints of the series in different vernaculars and classics, books of paraphrases, grammars, glossaries, &c. The following works under deserve a special notice as works of merit and of general interest.

Foremost among these is "Kátyáyana and Patanjali: their to each other and to Pánini," an able and erudite essay by Dr. Kielhorn on a question of Sanskrit grammar of great interest to mental scholars studying the system of the old native grammarians. "Amudi Mahotsáhah," or the great Moonlight Festival, is also a deserving publication, which consists of the Sanskrit texts of the aphorisms of Pánini, of its famous commentary Kaumudi, by Kojí-Dikshita, and of a Maráthi translation and explanation of the work. The work is prepared with much care and labour. It is a useful attempt, and deserves every encouragement from those who love the old Sanskrit language and take a lively interest in its cultivation.

"Amurkosha, with a commentary of Maheshwara," is an old Sanskrit dictionary very well known to the Oriental scholars. This edition is evidently prepared with considerable care. "Chandriká" or a Kuwalayánandah, or a work on figures of speech, with a commentary called Chandriká, is a Sanskrit work of considerable authority on the subject among the Sanskrit scholars. It treats of the different figures of speech to be met with in old Sanskrit poets. It defines them, illustrates them by examples from the Sanskrit classics, and often points out the distinctions between them when they appear very similar to each other. The commentary is also written with much learning, and is very useful in understanding the original. "Shamsul Loghát" is a dictionary of the Persian language. It is a re-print of considerable size and merit. The last, though not the least, I would notice the work "Pehlavi, Gujaráti, and English Dictionary," by Jámáspji

It consists of the original Sanskrit text of the Sutras or aphorisms, their paraphrase in classical Sanskrit, their translation both into Maráthi and English, and critical and explanatory notes also in Maráthi and English. It is a very useful and praiseworthy attempt deserving liberal encouragement from those for whom it is made. The work commences with the aphorisms of the Mímánsá school, or the Sutras of the sage Jaimini. Ten numbers of this work have been received during the year under report.

23. Religion.—This important head comprises this year seventy publications. They are in several languages both sacred and vernacular, and treat of the different forms of the religions which prevail in this vast continent. The collection contains re-prints of several respectable treatises on some of the sacred ceremonies of Brahmanism, re-prints of the Korán, of the Christian Gospels, of Zendá Vestá, three different editions of the scriptures of the modern sect of Swámi Náráyan, a very large collection of Jain hymns and Jain religious tracts, a few works of the Indian deists or rationalists.

24. Science Mathematical and Science Natural.—Seventeen works are registered under the first, and twenty-three works under the second of these heads. Most of the publications comprised under these heads are small school manuals, calling for no special notice here. There are two works, however, under the head of natural science which, in my humble opinion, deserve a particular mention. One of these is entitled "A Manual of Elementary Chemistry, Theoretical and Practical," by Báláji Prabhákar Modak, and the other is called "A treatise on Telegraphy, in Theory, History and Practice," by Vishnu Chinnáji Karwe. Both these works, though small, are very useful, and are written in a clear and readable style. A monthly periodical on Engineering subjects, several numbers of which are put under this head, is also a very praiseworthy attempt to propagate information on this important subject among the Maráthi-speaking population, and deserves a special mention here.

25. Travels and Voyages.—There are two works registered under this head. One of these is a Gujaráti translation of "Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen's Leaves from the journal of our life in the Highlands." The original is too famous to call for any remark here. The Gujaráti translation is neatly got up. The other work is too small to call for a notice.

26. There are altogether ninety-one printing presses in this Presidency, as is gathered from the quarterly catalogues published during the year under notice. They are distributed as follows:—Bombay has fifty presses, and has printed 512 books.—The Deccan has twenty-one presses, and has printed 223 books.—Guzerat has fifteen presses, and has printed 80 books.—The Southern Maráthá Country has two presses, and has published eight books.—Sind has three presses, and has printed nine books. Of the total number of publications, 558 are printed, while the remaining 274 are lithographed.

27. I beg to conclude this brief analysis by observing that, as far as I have been able to notice the general tone of the publications registered during the year, was unobjectionable as regards morality and loyalty.

BENGAL.

From H. M. KISHEN Esq., Officiating Under Secretary to the Government of Bengal, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department, No. 2097, dated 5th June 1878.

In continuation of this Government letter No. 1574 of the 5th June 1877, I am directed to submit herewith a return of publications received in the Bengal Library during the year 1877, prepared in the form prescribed by the Government of India in Circular No. 10-707 of the 26th April 1875.

2. I am to add that the delay in the submission of the return to this office by the Librarian has been unavoidable, but that arrangements have been made by that officer to secure greater punctuality in future.

Report on the Bengal Library for 1877.

The Bengal Library has now reached its tenth year. The number of books and pamphlets in it is estimated at twelve thousand. A large proportion of these are small dramas, or works of fiction and tracts. Few books of the very indecent character, which at first were introduced into the Library, are now sent in; but it is hard to say whether this is to be attributed to any more decided moral tone attained by authors; it is rather to be feared that they are still printed and circulated, but not registered. In Assamese there has been only one book, the fifth edition of a grammar, published by Baboo Dinavandhu Tarkálankár. We are not at liberty to infer from this that no other books in this language have been issued from the press: it is more probable that Assam having been made a separate Commissionership, the publishers no longer feel themselves bound to send their books to the Bengal Library. If this be the true reason, it may be advisable to form a Library of the like kind in that province. The largest number of books, as might be expected, are published in Bengali and other vernacular languages spoken in the province, of which the number received into the Library during the year under report amounts to 941.

The number of biographical works—original, re-published, and translated—amounts to 19. Among these are the ## Biography.

“Life and Travels of Felix Liddons;” “Mr. Stern’s Brief Memoir of Lady Von Krudener;” a translation of “John Stuart Mill’s Autobiography;” and the twenty-fourth edition of “Ishwarchandra Vidyáságar’s Charitávali.” There are also some biographical sketches of native females, of which “Jivanálékhyá, or, Outlines of a life,” deserves special mention. The subject of the memoir is Brahmamayí, the late wife of Durgámohan Dás. She was earnest in the promotion of female education, widow-marriage, and every other social reform that might ameliorate the condition of native females. The increase in the number of biographical works may be accepted as a proof that the people have now come to see the importance of preserving records of the habits and actions of those who have won for themselves public esteem, and that English education has brought about a change in the current of popular thought on this subject, for works of biography were formerly exceedingly rare. In English, the biographical sketch of David Hare, by Pyári Chánd Mittra, has been written with great care; the memoir of the late Justice Anukul Chunder Mookerjee, a work the “Baboo English” of which was almost a subject of comment everywhere, has reached its second edition.

Compared with the numbers given in the last year’s analysis, Dramas show an increase of one, amounting to 69 works. Of the 55 in the languages spoken in the provinces, 23 are based on incidents taken from the “Mahábhárat,” “Rámáyan,” or other Puráns; six are founded on historical occurrences; and 12 have reference to social customs. In English, there is only one original dramatic work, by Major H. Gray, and entitled “Which shall it be?” in three Acts, intended to represent incidents in Simla society. The rest are re-publications of Shakespeare’s plays. In Hindi, the year under review witnessed the issue of the first dramatic work, entitled “Sajjad Sumbul Náta,” adapted from the Bengali play "Sharat and Sarojini." In Uriya, the Bábáji Náatak has been written with a view to discourage the use of intoxicating drugs. In the last two languages this branch of literary composition appears to be in its infancy, and affords some insight into the progress of education among the people by whom they are respectively spoken. While the growing intelligence of the Beharis, under the fostering influence of British rule and civilization, might lead one to expect dramatic works describing the condition of their society, or some subject possessing an interest for all time, the first production is not, it must be confessed, encouraging, and is merely an adaptation, the original of which in Bengali is but an indifferent work. The case is the same with Uriya: the writers in that language also looking up to Bengal for models. A careful study of the subject will show the degree of influence which is exercised by Bengali literature on the people of Behar and Orissa; and it is not a matter of unalloyed satisfaction that the Hindi, Uriya, and even, to a certain extent, Urdu, are, in the matter of dramatic composition, indebted to Bengal. The present state of dramas in this province is not satisfactory. As noted above, the great majority are based on incidents borrowed from the Purans, and possess but very little merit. There are others founded on historical occurrences, of which no better can be said. The writers for the most part seem to think that some stirring incident from the Purans, which is well known to the readers, a profusion of dialogues in language neither witty nor polished, and a few love-scenes, no matter whether decent or not, are all that is required in a dramatic composition. Obscene expressions and characters are constantly to be met with in Bengali dramas. Of course, there are exceptions; but their number is extremely small. The greater part of the dramas in the vernacular languages spoken in the province, especially in Bengali, are utterly devoid of literary ability, elevated moral tone, or any correct description of the condition of society. Of those dwelling on topics of social importance, may be mentioned "Eman Karma ár Karba ná; or, "I will not do the like again," a farce by Jyotirindra Nath Tagore, intended to show the evil effects of reading the novels current at the present day, as culculated to vitiate the tastes of Hindu females; "Ghont Mangal Prahasan; or, A Comedy of a disorderly discussion about Caste;" "Jeman Deva temni Devi; or, "As is the God, so is the Goddess," describing the condition and practices of people living in villages; "Jhakmárir Másul; or, Regret at being taxed," which takes pains to show that a young wife is a tax on the purse and patience of an old man; "Palligrámastha Sámájik Abasthá Vishayak Náatak;" or, A Drama relating to the condition of society in villages;" and "Kalir Bau Ghar Bhángáni Náatak; or, the daughter-in-law of the Kali age; the ruin of a household, showing the disposition of the present Hindu daughters-in-law. In Sanskrit, a new edition of the "Máhavíra Charitam" of Bhavavuti appeared during the year.

Of the seventy works of Fiction, the greater portion consists of love-tales, and the remainder dwell on topics of historical or social importance. We may mention the following as typical of the class: "Dip Nirvána; or, Extinguishing of the Light," a narrative founded on the invasion of India by the Muhammadans; "Gosthi katha; or, Social Chit-Chat;" Koraké. Kíta; or, Worms in the Bul; or, a picture of society," dwelling on the privileges accorded to Kúliás and their evil consequences; "Mádhaví Kankana" by Ramésh Chandra Datta, c.s., a historical tale of the times of Shah Jehan and Aurungzebe; "Sapatni Sandarbha," shewing the evil effects of polygamy; "Samar Vasaná," a historical tale of the time of Alauddin. "Sharachelandra Upanyás" is a tale in which the hero speaks, often in strong language, of discontent towards British rule. The mutiny of 1857 was an outcome of this; the hero takes part in it, and with his own hand slays four British officers.

Among works of fiction, designed for educational purposes, may be mentioned the "Illustrated Arabian Nights" in Bengali; the "Adventures of Telemachus;" and the "Vetal Panchavinsati; or the Twenty-five Tales related by the demon Vetal," all re-publications. In Mussulmani Bengali, there has been the usual number of love-tales. In Urdu, there is only one work of fiction, namely, "Turjumah ut Tafah," or, a translation of a Persian work of that name, describing the wanderings of a man who left his wife behind, and, on his return, found that she had re-married. In Uriya, there were published three works of fiction for educational purposes, namely "Savitri," the story of a virtuous female; Akhyán Manjarí, translated from the Bengali work bearing the same name; and "Nyáyaratnákara; or, The Ocean of Propriety," translated from the Persian of Saadi's Gulistan. During the year under report the "Prem Ságerá" was published in English and Hindi as an authorized text-book for the examination of Government officers in Hindi.

Among original works in History may be mentioned the "Aitihásik Rahasya; or, Historical Notices," Parts I and II, by Ram Das Sen, containing essays on the ancient history of India; Kalidas, Vanbhata, the Jain and Vuddha religions; the triumphs of Shakya, Sinha, and the Indian stage. The profound erudition and researches displayed by the writer in this work have received commendation from Professor Max Müller and other European savants. Part I has reached its second edition. The "Sipahi Juddher Itihas; or, History of the Sepoy War," by Rajaníkánta Gupta, Part I; dwelling on the causes of the mutiny of 1857; which occurred during Lord Dalhousie's time and broke out under Lord Canning; and Part II, on Lord Dalhousie's administration and his treatment of the different Native States, Oudh in particular. The observations made by the writer in this work on the conduct of the British Government during that crisis are free from flattery; and it is said that in Part III, which has not yet been published, they are so trenchant and unfavourable, that a difficulty has arisen in the way of its publication, the passing of the Vernacular Press Act having frightened the native publishers. There have been re-publications of several histories of Bengal and India which are designed for educational purposes. A history of the Russo-Turkish War, with four maps, by F. F. Wyman, has appeared in English, as also a translation into Hindi of the Hindu Period of Marshman's history of India, by Major H. S. Jarrett. The re publication of Tod's Annals and Antiquities of Rajasthan is continued. In Urdu and Uriya there have been published school histories of India.

Books included under the general head of Language have all been classified under the following divisions: (A) Language. Composition, (B) Dictionaries, (C) Grammar, (D) Keys, (E) Primers, (F) Readers, and (G) Versification. Under all these heads, especially Keys, Primers and Readers, a large increase is noticeable in all the vernacular languages. In Sanskrit, the “Shavdakalpadruma; or, an Eneyelopædia by the late Sir Raja Radhakanta Dev, Bahadur; “Váehaspatya” of Professor Táránáth Tarka Váehaspati; and the “Abhidhan Chintamani” of Hem Chandra Acharjya, are in the course of re-publication; and the “Prakritívad” in Bengali, is an important dictionary. The English-Sanskrit Dictionary, edited by Ananda Ram Barua, C. S., promises to be a valuable work. The first volume only has yet appeared. The large number of Keys published last year is not satisfactory, and affords evidence of the universal prevalence of eram in both the English and Vernacular schools of the country. Most of these publications abound in errors.

In Law, only one original work, called the “Kar-Sankranta Prastava; or, Discourse on Rent,” in Bengali, by Hari Das Gupta, has been published during the year. This is a review of the Minute of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, relative to an increase of rent with a view to ascertain the rights of zemindars, middle-class tenants, and cultivators. In English have appeared an “Essay on the necessity of religious ceremonies in adoption in the Dattaka form” by Guru Das Banerji, M. A. and B. L., as also an “Essay on the Story of Spiritual Benefits, the basis of Succession in Hindu Laws,” by Trailokyanath Mittra, M. A. and B. L.; besides the “Tagore Law Lectures on the Law of Mortgage in India for 1875-76,” by Rasvihari Ghosh; and an “Essay on some Unsettled Questions of Succession under the Bengal School of Hindu Law,” by Krishnakamal, Bhattacharjya, B. L.

Under the head of Medicine prominent mention should be made of the Hindu Materia Medica in English, compiled mainly from the Sanskrit by Udayachand Datta, with a glossary of Indian plants by George King, M. B. and F. L. S. In Bengali have appeared the “Bhaishajya Muktavali; or, A Row of Pearls of Medicine,” treating of diseases and their cure according to the European method, by Jagat Vandhu Vasu. There have been four works on the homœopathic system, which is gradually increasing in popularity. In Sanskrit have appeared the “Charak Sanhitá” and the “Satik Nidán;” in Urdu, “Itaj-ul Aam; or, General Medicine;” and in Uriya, “The Essentials of Materia Medica,” compiled by Dr. Stewart, Civil Surgeon of Cuttack.

Among Miscellaneous works in Bengali may be mentioned “Dínavandhu Mitra Ráya Báhádurér Pránita Granthávali; or, the collected works of Ráya Dinavandhu Mitra Bahadur;” “Pravandha Málá; or, A Garland of Essays” by Rajanikánta Gupta, the author of “The History of the Sepoy War” in Bengali; the “Praváth Chintá; or, Dawning Thoughts,” by Kali Prasanna Ghose, re-printed from the Vándhava, containing well-written essays ; and "Suraloké Bangár Parichaya ; or, Bengal represented among the celestial inhabitants," in which deceased natives in the world of spirits are described as discoursing on the manners and literature of Native society in Bengal ; and a Discourse relative to the history and geography of India in Bengali, designed for educational purposes ; and "Hafiz" translated by Grish Chunder Sen. In English, the following deserve notice : "The Currency of India," by D. Mackenzie Smeaton, M. A., B. C. S., on the change required in the present standard and the means of effecting it ; "England and Islam," by A. H. Haggard, B. C. S., about neutrality in Russo-Turkish affairs and India, being a Darul Islam ; "Indian views of England" by Nagendra Nath Ghose, Barrister-at-Law, expressing favourable opinions on England after a visit ; and introduction to the "Lalita Vistara," being early memoirs of "Shakya Buddha," by Rajendra Lala Mittra, LL. D. ; "The Literature of Bengal," by Ramesh Chandra Datta, B. C. S.,—an attempt to trace the progress of the national mind and its aspects ; "Manchester and India," by R. Knight ; a Protest against Sir John Strachey's Financial Statement in the Legislative Council of India, dated 15th March 1877 ; "The influence on the Mind of the Study and the Practice of Law," by H. R. Fink ; and "A White Pamphlet," by T. M. Kirkwood, being notes on the famine of 1877, defending Sir R. Temple's measures in connection with it ; and the collected works of Sir W. Jones, Kt., edited and republished by Jogendra Nath Ghose.

In Philosophy, the "Sankhyá Darshan ; or, The Sankhyá Philosophy," by Kálivara Vedanta Vagish, Part I, is an able exposition of the principles of that system of Hindu Philosophy. In English we have on the same subject an "Analysis of Sir William Hamilton's Lectures on Metaphysics," by Reverend R. Jardine, B. D. and D. S. C. ; and an "Analysis of Fowler's Deductive Logic," by Navadvipa Raya. In Sanskrit the books on this subject have all been new editions of standard authors in the different branches of the Hindoo philosophy.

In Poetry, there have been published three works on the cyclone and storm-wave, which caused much damage in Eastern Bengal on the 31st October 1876 ; two on Durgá Pujá ; five on the visit of the Prince of Wales to India and the celebration of an Imperial assemblage at Delhi ; and four on Patriotism. The following, however, are deserving of notice under this head, namely, "Bhuvan Mohiní Pratibhá ; or, The Genius of Bhuvan Mohiní," verses on various subjects—written in a superior style, and containing sentiments generally regarded as sublime ; "Kulrahasya Kavyá ; or, Verses on the Hidden Things of Kulinism," by Srinath Sinha—the origin of the Kulins, and the lamentable state of their daughters ; monogamy having been enjoined on their ancestors, a proposition is made to petition Council to pass a law against Kulin polygamy ; "Naliní" by Audhar Lal Sen, a love-poem in imitation of Swinburne's Poems ; "Nishitha Chintá ; or, Meditations at Night" (induced by its darkness and stillness) by Raj Krishna Rayá, a little work which possesses much merit ; "Práchin Kávyá Sangraha ; or, a Collection of Ancient Poems," edited by Akshaya Chandra Sarkár, with notes and a glossary ; and "Vritra Sanhár ; or, The Slaughter of Vritra," Part II, by Hem Chandra Banerji, the best living poet of Bengal. Besides the above, there have been published in Bengali various sonnets and verses and poetical readers for the use of schools and for educational purposes generally. In English, may be mentioned the "Imperial Bouquet of Pretty Flowers" (with a bust portrait of Lord Lytton), by N. A. Chick, containing collections from the poetical parterre of Robert Lord Lytton, Viceroy and Governor-General of India. In Hindi, "The Indian Pilgrim," Canto I, by Jogesh Chandra Datta ; and a metrical translation of the "Prém Sâgara." In Persian, "Quasidah-i-Talimiyyat ; or, Benedictory Verses, by Wahid-ud-din Khan Bahadur—lines on the advantages of the British Government, Railways, Education, &c., and in honor of the assumption of the title of Empress" In Urdu, has appeared on the same subject "Mubârikbâd Janab Malikah-i-Muazima Quaisar-i-Hind ; or, Welcome to Her Majesty the Empress of Hindustan." And in Uriya, the "Bhâratotsava," by Gobinda Nath Sharma.

In Religion, there has been the usual number of re-publications of Hindu Shastras, besides Brahmo and Christian tracts, and pamphlets on the Mahomedan religion in Urdu and Bengali-Mussulmani.

In Science, those worthy of mention, in Bengali, are the "Sachitra Rasâyan Shikshâ ; or, Illustrated Instructions in Chemistry," by Rajkrishna Raya Chowdhury. In Hindi "Lîlâvatî," translated from the original work of Bhâskarâchâryya. In English, "Bamboo and its Uses," by Sulpiz Knrz, Curator, Botanical Garden, with coloured lithograph plates ; and a work on Ornithology, called the "Birds nesting in India" (illustrated), by Captain G. F. L. Marshall, R. E. and R. Z. S. R. ; A calendar of the breeding seasons, and a popular guide to the habits and haunts of birds. On the same subject, the "Birds of India," by the late J. C. Jerdon, Surgeon-Major, Madras Army, has been re-published during the year. Several numbers of the work on Astrology, in Sanskrit, entitled "Falita-Jyotish ; or, Practical Astronomy," have been published by Wasik Mohan Chatterji.

Of Bengali magazines and periodicals, the "Banga Darshan" has been revived. This magazine was announced as closed with the last number of Volume IV on the 30th July last, but it has again made its appearance under a new editor. It is now conducted with less ability than formerly ; and, as a consequence of this, its popularity is steadily diminishing. The place once held by this publication in the periodical literature of Bengal is now worthily filled by the "Bhâratî ; or, "The Goddess of Learning and Eloquence," a new monthly review conducted by Dwijendra Nath Tagore, and containing able and well-written articles on philosophy and general literature ; "Vândhava" ; or, "The Friend", hailing from Dacca, continues to maintain its reputation as a periodical of a superior order. In English, the "Indian Student" has been started for educational purposes. This is a very promising new periodical, and is edited by Kalicharan Banerji, M. A. and B. L. It has very valuable contributors in many of the able and experienced European Professors in the Government and Missionary Colleges of Bengal.

NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES AND OUDH.

From C. ROBERTSON, Esq., Secretary to Government, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department, No. 689A, dated Allahabad, the 29th March 1878.

I am directed to forward, for the information of His Excellency the Governor General in Council, a copy of the report on publications registered in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh during the year 1877, together with the orders of this Government thereon.

From M. KRUMHOLTZ, Esq., Director of Public Instruction, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, to the Secretary to Government, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, No. 1505G, dated Allahabad, the 9th February 1878.

I have the honour to submit a report, with tabular statement in the form prescribed, of books and pamphlets registered under Act XXV of 1867 in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh during 1877. The quarterly catalogues are separate for the two sections of the province in the first quarter; but in the catalogues for the second, third and fourth, the publications are combined. The Oudh catalogue for the first quarter has been weeded of a few unnecessary entries.

2. Distributed by languages, the publications are counted in the manner given in the margin. The vernacular works are, therefore, rather more than half the whole; which is a lower proportion than I have usually observed. Of the 459 vernacular works, 338 are in Urdu, and 121 in Hindi; of the 321 Oriental works, 210 are in Persian, 93 in Arabic, and 18 in Sanskrit.

3. More than half the works are re-prints, viz., 55 per cent., as shown in the margin, but I have found it a difficult matter to make the classification.

The Catalogue (9th col.) is of very little assistance in this respect. A large number of the works entered as first editions are old books. The Bāgh-o-bahār, for instance, is entered in one place as a first edition. Many others thus entered have been known to me for years—e.g., the Qissai Kazi Jaunpur, Sipahizada, &c., which are constantly being re-published. I have tested all the entries in col. 9, and have counted all works as re-prints which are so to my personal knowledge, notwithstanding their appearance as first editions.

4. The 3rd col. of the Catalogue should be a literal version of the title in the case of Oriental books. The translator employed is incompetent. I select a few of his worst mistakes. The serial number 186 (2nd quarter) belongs to the Divān-i-Ashik. This is rendered "Poems of Love," and col. 13 adds "An Amorous Poem." Nothing could be more misleading. Ashik is merely the takhallus of the poet, and his verses, so far from being "amorous," are ingeniously moral.

The Nishát-i-Akbbáb, No. 140, in the same quarter is guessed at as "Women and Wine." In this case Nishát is the takhallus, and the poet, punning on his own name, calls his verses the Delight of his Friends. There is nothing epigrammatic in their contents, and the author is a man of character and respectability. The common Urdu religious tract called Ráh-i-Naját (Nos. 187, 235, 317), which treats of the Way of Salvation, according to the teaching of Islam, appears in the Catalogue as "The Way Out." The well-known Mirát-ul-Urús is rendered the Mirror of Virtue.

The Arabic Grammar, called Miftáh-ul-Adab, the Key of Literature, is entered as a Manual of Obeisance, and the last column says "A manual of obeisance, or key to the selection of words to be used on different occasions." The name of an Arabic logic primer is given as Qala Qúl, "My Views." It is nothing of the sort. It should be written Qál aqúl, and means "He said, I say"—that is, the teaching is given in the form of question and answer. No. 400 (third quarter) is called Mayúgh nika Fissárfé (sic), and the translation given of this Arabic title conveys the very opposite meaning to what the author intended.

5. There are very few works which demand special notice. I shall comment very briefly on a few of the more noteworthy, taking them in the order of the subjects named in the tabular statement.

- (1) Biography.—The entries are mere tracts of no value.
- (2) Drama.—The English work is an annotated school edition of Shakespear's Henry V. The rest are Hindi tracts.
- (3) Fiction.—All re-prints of the Fisána-i-Ajáb and Bágh-o-bahár type.
- (4) History.—Two works are worthy of attention under this head. The first is No. 184 in the 2nd quarter, Saulat Afgháni, a new work (4to. or Svo.), of 700 pages, published by Newal Kishore (Cawnpore). The author is an Afghán (Afridi), by name Muhammed Zerdar Khan, long resident in Upper India, to judge by his Urdu. He has travelled in Kabul, and this work is the result. It contains a full account of the Afgháns and of the clans which people the country, and is well worthy of the study of those who are interested in frontier politics. The second is an Urdu version in two folio volumes of Todd's History of Rájputána, published by Newal Kishore (Lucknow), at Rs. 50 a copy. I have examined portions of this work, and find the translators have been accurate and idiomatic. The enterprise of the great publisher of Upper India, and his judgment in the selection of this work are commendable. I understand that the Native Chiefs of Western India are much interested in the issue of this publication.
- (5) Language.—This category is swelled with Primers and Grammars, Persian and Arabic preponderating. Fallon's Dictionary, the peculiarities of which I noticed last year, come under the polyglot entries. It has now reached its 12th part.

- (6) Law. Mr. P. Carnegie's most useful and most interesting glossary of "Kachhari technicalities" (No. 49 in the 1st quarter), deserves special notice, as the valuable record of personal knowledge acquired during a long official career.

A more widely useful work is Mr. Knox's Digest of Civil Procedure in India, Vol. I (No. 719 in the 4th quarter). Vol. II has since appeared, and the complete work forms a manual of real practical value. The historic tone of the treatment is specially interesting. The same author publishes Part I of an Urdu translation of Act X of 1877. A good translation in Urdu and Hindi has already been printed by M. Nisar Ali Beg; and an inferior version by M. Sada Sukh Lál, the Government translator. I notice also a useful Urdu treatise on Hindu law (No. 800), by M. Bakhshish Lál. This work professes to give a more complete and extended knowledge of the subject than is contained in Macnaghten's Principles. The remainder of the publications under this head are chiefly translations of minor Acts, or collections of Acts, or of special treatises.

- (7) Medicines.—The English work entered is a useful brochure, containing practical advice for the home treatment of the commoner ailments to which European families in India are liable, by Dr. F. R. Hogg. The other works are re-prints of native treatises which are much in demand.

- (8) Miscellaneous.—The entries under this head are numerous, because it embraces all subjects which do not strictly belong to the other fourteen heads. Works on morals, or literature, school readers, letter-writers, pamphlets on social topics, and books on magic, astrology, or fortune-telling, are entered here. Among the chief literary publications of the year I find Mr. Growse's admirable prose version of the Ramáyán of Tulsi Das, Book I (No. 55).

No. 699 in the 4th quarter, called Anwar-ul-ramal, is an interesting specimen of the many works on fortune-telling which are current among the educated classes. This work is Persian, but Abdul Ghani is not the author. It was composed by Fazl Haqq of Khairabad, tutor of the former Náwáb of Rámpur, and is a compilation from old oriental treatises. This edition is an incorrect one and requires revision. Dice are not necessary for the working of the system of divination laid down in this book, as said in the column of remarks in the catalogue. Four throws of four dice may be used, but the ordinary plan is for the operator to make sets of dots on paper at random, pairs of which joined by lines are then placed in rows, four rows in each of four sets. These are reduced, by a peculiar process of combination, to one set of four quaternions of odd and even symbols, which are called "the mother." A similar calculation produces "the daughter." Then come the aulad or progeny, of which the union in the third generation, so to speak, yields—by the application of an ordinary principle of algebra—a final set of divining agencies. Not to pursue the description further, the bulk of the book is devoted to the explication of the correspondences and divergences of place or relation which occur in the permutations of symbols, each of which has its peculiar technical aspect in the representation of wishes and their fulfilment, which is thus really reduced to a matter of luck, or ill-luck, chance or mischance. Nevertheless, divination of this sort is very commonly practised, and its results relied upon. I can name a clever hand at it in an office not far from my own, but the number of publications on this subject which issue is a sufficient illustration of the fashion.

- (9) Poetry.—The books entered under this head are chiefly re-prints. No fewer than fourteen fresh editions of the Bostan may be found in the catalogue, one of which by M. Newal Kishore is a gem of lithographic elegance. The Sikandar Nama also is constantly re-printed, and the Kulliyát, or complete works of Zouk, Zafar, and others, are evidently in demand. Very little anacreontic poetry has been published, or at least registered. Wherever the term Wásokht occurs in the title—(e. g. No 359, Wásokht-i-Amánat); the subject-matter is always of salacious tendency, but this particular specimen is comparatively innocent.
- (12) Religion.—As usual, this class of publication is the largest. I remark that out of 249 entries, nearly 70 per cent. belong to the Muhammadan creed. Nine editions of the Koran, 10,125 copies in all, have been published, and 43 separate editions of the parts of it in most constant use.

The Guftú-i-Mazhab (No. 57) is an interesting account of the last debate on Christianity as compared with Islam and Hinduism which took place at the Khuda Shinási Mela, yearly held at Chándapur, near Sháhjahánpur, under the auspices of the American Mission. Maulvis of repute come from long distances to join in the discussions, which appear to be conducted amicably. A well-known Hindu gentleman of Sháhjahánpur pays the expenses and partakes in the debate on his own side.

The Faiz-i-Muazzam (No. 92) is a work of a somewhat similar kind. It is not a controversy between Christianity and Islam, as represented in the catalogue, but an attempt on the Muhammadan side to show that the objection urged against Islam, to the effect that women are regarded by its principles as an inferior order of creation, is not founded on fact. The work has been brought out by a Cawnpore Press at the instance of two Deputy Collectors and a Subordinate Judge in Bengal.

- (13) and (14). The works entered under this head are chiefly school books. Vol. II of the Roorkee Treatise on Civil Engineering in India, edited by Major Lang, R.N., is a valuable scientific work, and an excellent specimen of the typography of the College Press.

6. You have already informed me of the wish expressed by the Supreme Government that only selected works should be forwarded to the India Office Library instead of a copy of all the publications. It would be easy to say what books need not be sent, judging by conventional European notions of what constitutes literary value; but it would be as well if the Librarian at the India Office would lay down some definition of the principles of exclusion. Much of the Native literature is interesting in other particulars than those which belong to standards of Western excellence. What is popular, however feeble and tasteless to the foreign critic, is always an indication of the turn of national thought, and must be taken into account in forming an estimate of moral and social advancement or declension. For instance, comparing years with years, I observe a marked tendency to a religious revival among the Muhammadans, no less than a re-awakening of their attention to education in their own sense of the word. On the other hand, stagnation and cessation of effort seem to characterize the Hindu mind, so far as regards recurrence to the past. The perseverance and absence of reserve with which they accept Western teaching have already largely bettered their condition morally and materially, and another generation will see more pronounced advances. The absence of political pamphlets from the catalogues, since the passing of the Registration Act, is a good or bad sign according to the views of the observer respecting the value of freedom of speech under the present circumstances of the country. For my own part, I should welcome the appearance of pamphlets of this sort, which carried their author's name as a guarantee of his good faith. Lala Lachmi Narain's pamphlet on famines in India is a case in point. His views may be impracticable, but their expression is a contribution to the literature of the subject from a landholder's point of view. Unfortunately, the fear of giving offence to superior officers, of acquiring the character of a muftid admi, or of a bumptious writer of imperfect English, restrains men from the open expression of opinions which might be of considerable value. The tendency is, therefore, to anonymous writing in newspaper columns—a cowardly and unwholesome refuge—unwholesome because the security from detection which it promises leads to the misrepresentation of facts and intentions; and misrepresentation of the intentions of the Government has always been the lever of sedition in this country. I have alluded to this matter because I am of opinion it would be of advantage to the Government to stimulate the open expression of native opinion of value by calling upon the Commissioners, or other leading officials, to collect the written opinions of Native officers of mark or independent men of influence and position in their divisions, on topics of political or legislative importance, as they arise. These should be in the vernacular, and might be summarized by the Commissioners in English for the information of the Government, and be published in original form from time to time, as expediency suggested.

The absorption of the publishing trade at Cawnpore and Lucknow is remarkable. It is chiefly due to the enterprize of M. Newal Kishore of Lucknow, who, following the example of the Kings of Oudh, before the annexation, has opened a branch press at Cawnpore, which is more conveniently situated for the resort of book merchants from Upper and Central and Western India. Nearly one-half of the publications at Cawnpore and Lucknow together are from his presses; and his only important rival is the old Nizami Press of Cawnpore, which is famous for the excellence of its lithography. The increasing cheapness and excellence of Newal Kishore's work is gradually absorbing the public patronage. I have already noticed one beautiful specimen of the lithographic art from his establishment, but there are numerous other examples of merit. The demand for inexpensive books, however, necessitates the use of inferior sorts of paper and inferior caligraphy in the majority of instances. M. Newal Kishore's position as an employer of labour is unique in the Province, and I am glad to add that he is a liberal and considerate master. His services to the Education Department in Oudh have been invaluable, and I wish to see them still further utilized in the North-Western Provinces.

From C. ROBERTSON, Esq., Secretary to Government, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, to the Inspector General of Schools, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, No. 688A, dated Allahabad, the 29th March 1878.

I AM directed to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. Kempson's letter No.  $\frac{6}{170}$ , dated the 9th February 1878, being a report on the books and pamphlets registered in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, under Act XXV of 1867, during the year 1877.

2. The great increase in the number of works registered during the past year, as compared with previous years, is accounted for by the inclusion of the Oudh returns consequent on the amalgamation of the provinces. Deducting the Oudh publications from the total of both provinces, there remain 565 works for the North-Western Provinces alone—a result which points to a steady advance in literary activity.

1875	...	358	} N. W. P. only.
1876	...	387
1877	...	898	N. W. P. and Oudh.

3. Of the 898 publications, the linguistic classification shows the following result :—

English	...	...	...	...	21
Vernacular (Urdu and Hindi)	...	...	...	...	459
Classical (Sanskrit, Persian, and Arabic)	...	...	...	...	321
Polyglot	...	...	...	...	97

More than half of the 898 are re-prints, 359 are original works, and 38 are translations.

4. Very few works call for special remark. Under "History," Mr. Kempson notices the "Saulat Afghani" of Muhammad Zerdar Khan, which should be of some interest; as also the Hindi version of Todd's Rajputana—both published by Munshi Newal Kishore. Religious topics monopolize a large proportion of the publications, and 70 per cent. of the religious works are Muhammadan.

5. The principal centres of publication are Cawnpore and Lucknow, which contributed 353 and 322, respectively, of the works issued during the past year. In both these places Munshi Newal Kishore stands far ahead in the number and value of his publications; and His Honour the Lieutenant Governor and Chief Commissioner is glad to receive Mr. Kempson's testimony to the value of the work accomplished at the Newar Kishore Presses.

6. With reference to para. 4 of Mr. Kempson's letter, regarding the quarterly catalogues of registered books, I am to state that after the preparation of the catalogues for the first two quarters of the year, attention was drawn to the errors they contained, and arrangements were made which resulted in the production of more accurate catalogues for the third and fourth quarters. As the preparation of these lists has now been entrusted to your office by G. O. No. 434A., dated 5th March 1878, it is hoped that they will be compiled in a careful and scholarly manner in the future. Mr. Kempson would seem to suppose that it is not customary for Commissioners and other high officers to ask for the opinions of Native officers of mark or natives of independence on topics of political or legislative importance. In this he is mistaken. It will be found that on every such point, as it arises, native opinion and advice is almost always taken.

7. In para. 6 Mr. Kempson suggests that it would be as well if the Librarian at the India Office would explain clearly the principles on which the selection of works to be forwarded to England should be based, on the supposition that only selected works are now sent to the India Office Library. In regard to this I am to say that, although a proposal of this kind was made by the Finance Committee, orders were subsequently received (copy enclosed)* from the Government of India to the effect that, for the present, copies of all registered works should continue to be sent as hitherto. This is being done, and will continue to be done pending the receipt of further orders from the Home authorities.

8. In conclusion, I am to remark with reference to Mr. Kempson's allusion in para. 6 of his letter, that the translation of the Civil Procedure

\* H. D. No.  $\frac{44}{2078}$ , dated 16th

Nov. 1877, and enclosure.

Ditto. No. 1-4, dated 2nd
January 1878, and enclosure.

Code by Lala Sada Sukh Lal, the Government Translator, was subjected to searching criticism and thorough revision before it was published, and it was found that the objections made related chiefly to terms and phrases which had been used in the translation of the old Code, which had thereby come into current use, and to change which would not have been productive of confusion. The translation is believed to be an accurate and intelligent re-production of the original.

PUNJAB.

From J. G. CORDERY, Esq., Officiating Secretary to Government, Punjab and its Dependencies, to the Officiating Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department, No. 361C, dated Simla, the 24th July 1878.

I am desired to forward herewith a copy of the analysis of publications registered in the Punjab during the year 1877, together with copy of the covering letter of the Director of Public Instruction in this Province, No. 1313, dated 3rd instant.

From MAJOR W. R. M. HOLBOYD, Director of Public Instruction, Punjab, to the Officiating Secretary to Government, Punjab, No. 1313, dated Lahore, the 3rd July 1878.

I have the honor to submit, in the prescribed form, an analysis of books registered in the Punjab under Act XXV of 1867 during the year 1877, together with a brief report on the more important publications.

2. The total number of publications catalogued during the year 1877, together with a brief report on the more important publications.

Books whose copy-right has been registered. prescribed fee was 25.

3. The number of books whose copy-right was registered by payment of the prescribed fee was 25.

5. Of the books registered during the year, 453 per cent. were written in English, 73·12 per cent. in the English, Vernacular, Classical, vernacular languages of the province, 13·74 per cent. in Oriental classical languages, and 8·58 per cent. in more than one language.

6. I shall now notice in the order of subjects the most important of the publications under each of these four heads.

7. The number of English books delivered during the year is 37 against 30 of the previous year. The increase is due to the publication of two new periodicals, viz., the Proceedings of the United Service Institution of India and the Christian Intelligencer, of which 5 and 3 numbers respectively have been received. No important educational work in English was published during the year. Among those which are non-educational the following deserve notice:—

1. The Language, and Races of Dardistan, by Dr. G. W. Lietner, noticed in the Report for 1873. The edition published during the year is an illustrated one.
  2. The Elements of Jurisprudence, being the substance of a few lectures based on Austin's Jurisprudence delivered to the Law class of the Punjab University College, by Babu Shashi Bhushan Mukerji, M. A., B. L., Assistant Professor, Government College, Lahore. The book will, it is believed, be useful to those for whom it is intended.
  3. Digest of Indian Law Reports for 1876, by Mr. S. Clifford, Deputy Registrar, Chief Court, Punjab, a valuable book of reference for Pleaders.
  4. The Punjab Municipal Manual, by Mr. Nicholl, Secretary, Municipal Committee, Amritsar. This book contains all the rules and orders issued by authority on matters relating to Municipal Administration in the Punjab.
  5. A Native Church for the natives of India.
  6. The Indian Christian Intelligencer, conducted by the Reverend T. P. Hughes, of Peshawar, contains articles and contributions by some of the ablest missionaries and laymen in the province.
  7. Southern stellar objects for small telescopes by Mr. Gore, Assistant Engineer, containing selections from Sir John Herschell's work 'Results of astronomical observations at the Cape of Good Hope,' and on account of observations made in the Punjab.

9. Drama.—This comprises six editions of a play named Indar Sabha, noticed in the report for the previous year, and a dramatic story of the loves of Laila and Majnún, both acted by Parsi theatrical companies, of which there are at present two in the Punjab.

10. Fiction.—The books comprised under this head, with the exception of one not sufficiently important to require notice, have all been described in previous reports. The Rusum-i-Hind, of which two editions were printed during the year, continues to be appreciated in and out of the Department of Education. It contains stories illustrating in an interesting manner and in simple language the manners and customs of the natives.

11. History.—Four new works under this head have been published during the year :—The Tarikh-i-Punjab (History of the Punjab) by Rai Kanhaiya Lal Bahadur, Executive Engineer, Lahore, seems to be a good and useful book. It is a paraphrase into Urdu prose of the Zafar Nama-i-Ranjit Singh, by the same author published in 1876. The narrative commences with the time of Guru Nanak, the founder of the Sikh religion, and comes down to the present day. The Tamhid-i-Tawarikh-i-Hind, is a translation of Mr. Lethbridge's Easy Introduction to the History of India. The translator in publishing it unwittingly infringed the law of copyright which, in the present instance, belonged to Government. The book was so badly lithographed that it was not considered advisable to call upon him to deliver to Government the copies that had been printed. He has, however, been warned not to publish any future edition of his re-translation. A better translation, or rather adaptation of the book, has recently been published by the Government Book Depôt. The "Tarikh-i-Qaisari" purports to be a history of the Imperial Assemblage held at Delhi on the 1st January 1877. This work has appeared before the public in several forms, two editions containing lithographic illustrations very badly executed, and two other coloured portraits done by hand. The author, Mirza Muhammad Akbar Ali Khan, does not possess the knowledge essential for the task he undertook. He states that India was the first country peopled on the surface of the earth after the deluge, and that the Sulaiman mountains are the southern boundary of India. He has anticipated Mr. Talboys Wheeler in giving the area, the revenue, the title of the reigning Sovereign, &c., of each State, but the information supplied on these points is, in many instances, incorrect. The numerous inaccuracies which this book contains have marred its usefulness. Lāla Pyāre Lāl, Curator, Government Central Book Depôt, Punjab, is now engaged on the translation of Mr. Wheeler's work, which will, I hope, be much appreciated by the Indian Chiefs and the native public.

The "Sinín-i-Islam," Part II., by Dr. G. W. Leitner, is the last of the four new works on history above referred to. It contains a brief sketch of the History and Literature of the Muhammadans in Spain, Egypt, Turkey, Persia and India, with maps and a few illustrations. A review on this work was submitted to Government with my No. 87, dated 29th May 1877, and it does not therefore seem necessary to refer to it here in detail. It will suffice to state that it contains many errors, and does not in any way correspond with the description of it given in the preface. It is badly expressed and has much disappointed the expectations of the native public. Among re-publications in history, which are all educational books, may be noticed the second edition of the translation of Mr. Lethbridge's larger work on the History of India.

12. Language.—As usual, the books under this head consist of Language. Primers, Readers, Letter-writers and Elementary treatises on Grammar and Composition. Of the 47 publications registered during the year, nearly all are educational. The following new books published during the year deserve notice:—The "Talim-ul-Mubtadī", or Series of Vernacular Readers for Elementary Schools, edited by Major W. R. M. Holroyd. The series will comprise an Introductory Primer, eight Readers, and Manuals of Geography, Arithmetic and Mensuration.

An edition of the Primer and of the first and second Readers, with illustrations, was printed in England by the photozincographic process some time ago. Another edition of the first and second books, without the illustrations, was published by the Book Depôt during the year. 'One main purpose of the Readers,' to quote from the prospectus, 'in addition to the obvious one of teaching to read, is to train the observing faculties by reference to familiar things and to lead on the pupil step by step to an intelligent comprehension of vegetable and animal life, of the mineral kingdom, of agricultural and other processes, and of the more simple natural phenomena, and to familiarize him as far as is practicable by means of easy descriptive sketches with places and people beyond his actual experience.'

Fāizsul-Maāni and Fāiz-ul-Bayān are Urdu treatises on rhetoric and the art of composition compiled from Persian sources. The author, Umar Darāz, is employed as a copyist in the Punjabi Akhbar published at Lahore. Majalis-ul-Nisa, Part II., is a continuation of the story published under that name in 1874. It is intended for use in female schools. A new letter-writer has been published during the year in the Educational Press. It was originally compiled under the direction of the Commission appointed by the Government of India to revise text-books for the examination of military officers in 1864. This book is prescribed for the departmental examination of educational officers in the province. The Nagri books are all re-publications. In Punjab, a Reader called Istri-Updesh-Mala, based on christian doctrine and morality, has been published. This is designed apparently for the use of ladies of the zenána mission. A pamphlet on trans-literation has appeared to assist the candidates for the middle school examination.

13. Law.—The publications under Law are all written in Urdu, that being the language of the Courts. Of the 84 publications registered, 69 are numbers of the four journals published at Lahore, including the translation of Indian Law Reports published by the enterprising proprietor of the Koh-i-Nur press. The last has been discontinued since the commencement of the year 1878. Among the remaining 15, the following deserve notice:—A collection of the Acts and Regulations applicable to the Punjab, with notes by Munshi Jiwan Dás of the Financial Commissioner's Office.

An abridgement of Mr. Reynold's Digest of Civil cases decided by the Chief Court from 1866 to 1876. The new Civil Procedure Code with other civil enactments and notes by Pandit Rajnath, pleader, Allahabad.

Directions to Settlement Officers, translated from Mr Barkley's work.

14. Medicine.—Of the 28 entries under this head, 20 are numbers of the Medical Journals, the "Babri-Hikmat," edited by Dr. Rahim Khan and published under the auspices of the Punjab University College; and the "Mirat-ut-Tibabat," edited by Drs. Chetan Shah and Sahib Ditta. Of the former, seven, and of the latter thirteen parts were delivered during the year. The former is issued very irregularly. Up to the end of December 1877 not more than six parts had been published, though it is supposed to be a monthly journal. The "Mirat-ut-Tababat," published at Amritsar, is getting on admirably and appears to have done much good. Among the remaining eight works issued during the year the most important is the "Aina-i-Sozak," a Treatise on Gonorrhœa, by Dr. Chetan Shah, Khan Bahadur. "Tib-i-Rahimi" is a re-publication of Dr. Rahim Khan's work on medicine, noticed in the report for 1873, with additions and alterations. The works in Hindi and Punjabi are all based on either the Greek system, or on that of the Hindus, and do not deserve special mention.

15. Miscellaneous.—The publications under this head comprise elementary treatises on the Geography of India, the Punjab and the World; the numbers of a Literary and Scientific Journal, published at Ludhiana, but recently discontinued, Military publications, such as rifle exercises, musketry regulations, carbine exercises, &c., and pamphlets relating to amulets, charms and the interpretation of dreams. Treatises on Archæology, Astrology, Castes, Riddles, Music, and the Imperial Assemblage are also included under the same head. The following appear to me to deserve mention :—

Sansar Darpan by Shigopal has been written in Hindi in imitation of the Asar-us-Sanadid, or the Archaeology of Delhi, by Saiyad Ahmad, Khan Bahadur. It contains an account, together with illustrations, of the principal buildings in and around Delhi. Naghma-i-Sitar, or the art of playing on the Sitar, by Rahim Beg of Oudh. Guldasta-i-Rausa, by Maulvi Nusrat Ali of Delhi, gives an account of the Native States of India, shewing their boundaries, areas, revenue and expenditure, military strength and treaties with the British Indian Government. It also contains a brief account of the Delhi Imperial Assemblage. Shamim-i-Akhlaq, by Munshi Munji Lal, of the Patiala Educational Department, contains short essays on subjects useful to children, and select sentences, maxims and proverbs.

16. Poetry.—The number of works under the head of Poetry is 161, or 16 less than those published last year.

Poetry.

Among original works there is not one of sufficient importance to require notice. Among re-publications may be mentioned an edition of the Diwan-i-Abdur Rahman, or Poems of Abdur Rahman, the national poet of the Afghans, edited by the Reverend T. P. Hughes of Peshawar, and carefully collated with existing manuscripts, by Maulvi Ahmad of Tangi, Hashnagur; the Diwan-i-Zafar, or Poems by Zafar (nom de plume of the last titular King of Delhi); and the Diwan-i-Nazir, Poems by Nazir, a poet of Agra.

17. Religion.—The publications under this head may be classified as follows :—

Religion.

Christian	...	...	...	...	43
Muhammadan	...	...	...	...	55
Hindu and others	...	...	...	...	48
Total					146

The Christian publications, as usual, comprise tracts, translations of the Gospels and a few other books. The most remarkable among these last are (1), the Tahrif-i-Quran, by Lala Ram Chandra, in which the learned author has tried to prove that the text of the Quran has been corrupted by interpolations, made subsequent to the death of Muhammad, and that a considerable portion of the original has been rejected to make way for other matter; (2) the Aina-i-dil, or Mirror of the heart, translated from the German; and (3) the life of Dr. Judson, a Missionary who worked in Burmah.

Among the Mussalman publications I notice a Roman Urdu edition of Maulvi Abdul Kadir's translation of the Quran, edited by the Reverend T. P. Hughes; (2) Nawaid-i-Jawaid, by Mansur Ali of Delhi, which contains a refutation of attacks made by Missionaries on Muhammadanism and an attack on Christianity; (3) the Aqa'id-i-Islam, which treats of the creed of the Mussalmans, by Maulvi Abdul Haqq, a well-known Mussalman divine of Delhi; and (4) two editions of a work on Muhammadan Law, as illustrated in the life of Muhammad (Sifr-us-sa-Adat). The other works are generally of the nature noted in the last year's report, among which there are several controversial treatises which discuss Wahabi doctrines, including one (Dalil-ul-Mubin) which discusses the legality of reading Friday prayers in a country of which the ruler is not a Muhammadan, and arrives at the decision that the practice is legal. There is also a small pamphlet written in the Multani dialect on Muhammad's night journey to heaven.

Among Hindu religious books are included publications of the Sikh and Brahmo fraternities. The purely Hindu works are nine in number, but there does not seem to be a single book among them deserving of mention. The number of books on the Sikh religion is 12, and there is among them a voluminous work styled the Paras Bhag, treating of nature and nature's God and of the soul and future life. The Brahmo publications consist of a monthly periodical called the Hindu Bandhava, or Hindu's brother, of which 15 numbers were delivered during the year. In some of these are discussed the religious tenets of Swami Daya Nanda Saraswati, a Hindu reformer, who believes in the divine revelation of the Vedas, which he interprets in his own way and discredits the Puranas, which he considers as pure fiction invented by the Brahmans to serve their own purposes of aggrandizement. The Nit Prakash Sabha, a periodical published at Ludhiana, by Munshi Kanhaiya Lal, who is believed to be a pantheist, has ceased to exist.

18. Science (Mathematical).—The number of Mathematical works delivered during the year is 41 against 36 published last year. Of these, 27 are on Science (Mathematical.) Arithmetic, 3 on Algebra, 7 on Euclid, 2 on Mensuration, 1 on Logarithms, and 1 on Solid Geometry. The publications of the Educational Department amount to 13, and those of Professor Zakaulla of the Muir College to 10. The former comprise elementary treatises on Arithmetic, Algebra, Mensuration and Euclid used in schools. Among the latter, on almost the same subjects, I notice 5 new works, viz., a treatise on Conic sections compiled from the works of Taylor, Drew and Besant; a treatise on the use of Mathematical tables, a translation of the first chapter of Moore's work on Mensuration; a translation of Key to Todhunter's Algebra, and a treatise on Arithmetic called the Mirajul Hisab. The other books under this head do not deserve notice, being merely pamphlets.

19. Science (Natural).—The only work to be noticed under this head is a translation of Professor Balfour Stewart's Primer on Physics, published by Science (Natural.) the Educational Department in the Roman character.

Distribution of Classical books.

20. The following table shews the distribution of books in classical languages :—

SUBJECT,			Arabic.	Sanskrit.	Persian.	TOTAL.
Language	...	...	12	2	25	39
Medicine	...	...	1	...	1	2
Miscellaneous	...	...	...	1	1	2
Poetry	...	...	...	...	14	14
Philosophy (Mental)	...	...	3	...	1	4
Religion	...	...	23	11	15	49
Science (Natural)	..	...	1	...	1	2
TOTAL			40	14	58	112

21. Language.—Of the books included under this head no less than two-thirds are Primers, Readers and Letter-writers, and the remaining one-third comprise treatises on Grammar and Commentaries on standard Persian and Arabic works on the same subject. Among these last may be mentioned "Suwal-i-Kabuli," a commentary on the well-known work on Arabic syntax called the Sharh Mulla, which is itself a commentary on "Kafia;" and the Muqaddimat-us-Sarf, a translation of Dr. Leitner's Introduction to a philosophical Grammar of the Arabic language.

22. Medicine.—The two works on this subject are based on the system of the Greeks. The one written in Arabic is a Medical Dictionary, and the other written in Persian is an abridgement of a larger work by a well-known Oriental Physician named Imám Shárání.

23. Miscellaneous.—There is nothing of importance under this head. Of the two books, one is on Astrology and the other consists of copy-slips.

24. Poetry.—The entries under Poetry consist as in previous years of school readers and a few stories and panegyrics.

25. Philosophy (Mental).—All the four works noted under this head are on logic. Two of these, viz., a translation into Arabic of the small work called Isagoge of Porphyry from the Greek, and a commentary on Qutbí, a standard work on logic, are highly appreciated by the Mussalmans.

26. Religion.—The Persian and Arabic books under Religion are almost all Mussalman publications, those in Sanskrit being, of course, Hindu. The Arabic books comprise 13 editions of chapters of the Quran printed separately; an entire edition of the same book, five prayers, a commentary on a well-known treatise on Muhammadan law; two Wahábí publications, the one discussing the legality of pronouncing aloud the word Amen after prayers, and the other the heresies which have crept into the Muhammadan religion, and a collection of traditions. Among Persian works the "Tafsír-i-Azízi," a commentary on the last chapter of the Qurán; by the Muhammadan divine, Shah Abdul Azíz of Delhi, is the only book deserving of mention. The name of this author is well known all over India, and is highly respected by the Mussalmans.

The Sanskrit works comprise short treatises on the rituals observed by the Hindus at marriages, the investiture with the sacred thread, and the sacrifices to fire; stories illustrating the merits attached to fasting in honor of certain gods and goddesses; verses in praise of the goddess Durgā; a Purāṇ relating to what befalls the soul after its separation from the body; and a small pamphlet containing the principles of the Agra Sumāj, an association founded in the Punjab by Swāmi Dayā Nanda Saraswati.

27. Science (Natural).—The two works under this head are on Astronomy; the one representing the Ptolemaic system, and the other the Hindu.

28. The works written in more than one language comprise treatises on language, medicine, miscellaneous, poetry, and religion. On language there are 7 books, of which five are educational, being elementary treatises on grammar (Persian and Arabic), and a Persian-Urdū dictionary. Of the remaining, one is a guide to the Turkish language, translated from the Arabic, by Nusrat Ali of Delhi, into Persian and Urdū; and the other contains a glossary of works occurring in a certain work on Muhammadan law.

Under Medicine there is only one book, but it comprises two treatises, one written in Punjabi, and the other in Urdū, both based on the system of the Greeks, and noticed in previous reports.

'Miscellaneous' comprises six numbers of a periodical, started during the year for the benefit of candidates for the Middle School examination; four treatises on Astrology and the interpretation of dreams, and a collection of proverbs: none of these deserve notice. The poetical works are eight in number, of which six are vocabularies in rhyme, which are used in indigenous schools by beginners in Persian. Of the remaining two, one is a love tale, and the other contains verses in praise of the 24 Avatars of the Jains.

Religious elements is the strongest of all. The Hindu works are eleven in number, among which I notice a translation into Urdū and Persian of the Upnishad portions of the Vedas, and some other religious books of a philosophical nature. The others do not appear to be of sufficient importance to require notice.

The Mussalman works number 34. They consist of the Qurān, with a translation, commentaries on the Qurān and other religious books, traditions, sermons, books treating of religious observances of the Mussalmans, some Wahābī publications condemning a blind adherence to the teachings of the Imāms, and worship of tombs, and prayers, among which there is one for victory to the Turks over the Russians.

* The Author says that Hindu heirs are either cognates or agnates. Agnates are descended from the same family, but cognates are relations sprung from a different family. No cognate can succeed to the property of any deceased person so long as any agnate survives. The Mitaksara is a commentary on the institutes of najnar-alkya, and the book called the "Succession of cognates," details the law of the succession of cognates according to the commentary, and gives charts showing their succession. To the treatise are appended certain decisions on questions of Hindu inheritance as argued before Sir Barnes Peacock and other Chief Justices.

BRITISH BURMAH.

From R. HERR PILCHER, Esq., B. C. S., Officiating Junior Secretary to the Chief Commissioner, British Burma, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department, No. 936-311, dated Rangoon, the 18th April 1878.

I AM directed to submit, for the information of the Government of India, the analysis of publications registered during the year 1877, under Act XXV of 1877, in the Province of British Burma, in the form prescribed in the Home Department Resolution No. 10707, dated 26th April 1875.

2. There were 41 original works, as compared with 52 in the previous year, shewing a decrease of 11; of translations there were 20, against one in 1876, or an increase of 19. Of re-publications, 22 were registered,—20 of original works, and two of translations, against 11 of the former and two of the latter in the previous year.

3. The original works consisted principally of reports and other books on religious subjects published by the American Baptist Missionaries. There were none, however, of any great importance.

4. The re-publications comprised, as heretofore, of religious, dramatic and miscellaneous works printed in the Burmese and Karen languages.

MYSORE.

From MAJOR R. A. COLE, Officiating Secretary to the Chief Commissioner of Mysore, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department,—No. 9673-568, dated Bangalore, 2nd February 1878.

I have the honor, by direction of the Chief Commissioner, to submit a report and analysis of the publications registered in the Provinces of Mysore and Coorg during the year 1877, under the provisions of Act XXV of 1867, in accordance with the instructions contained in Home Department Resolution No. 10-707-716, dated 26th April 1875.

Report on Publications registered in Mysore and Coorg during the year 1877.

Quarter.	Books.	Pamphlets.
I	2	15
II	...	4
III	...	1
IV	5	5
TOTAL...	7	25

The number of works registered was only 32, against 68 last year and 38 the year before. The total was made up of 7 books and 25 pamphlets, which were registered in each quarter to the extent noted in the margin. But it may here be pointed out that these figures do not fully represent the literary activity of these provinces, and the same objection has occurred to me in writing these reviews in former years. For, although official publications, as such, namely, Departmental reports, proceedings, &c., are excluded from registration, and very properly so, there are many publications entirely of a literary character which, being official publications in the sense of works issued from the Government Press, are on that ground also not registered. Such are the school books issued for the Educational Department, &c. Should the exclusion of these be required by a strict application of the rules of the Act, and the same be the practice under other Governments, it is suggested that the rules might be modified with regard to this particular.

2. An analysis of the publications now under review is attached to this report in the prescribed form. From that it appears that 27 works were in the vernacular languages of the country, one in an Indian classical language, and four in more than one language. Of the first, 18 were in Canarese and nine in Hindustani; the work in a classical language was in Sanskrit; and of the others, one was in Canarese and English, one in Canarese and Latin, one in Sanskrit and Canarese, and one in English and Hindustani.

3. In subject-matter, the religious works are, as usual, most numerous, there being nine under that head. Then follow works of fiction, to the number of eight. Under language there are three; under biography, the drama and law two each; and one each under the several heads of history, medicine, miscellaneous, poetry, philosophy, and natural science. Under politics, mathematics and travels there is no entry.

4. Biography.—Here have been entered an account of the death of Muhammad in Hindustani, and a life of Ambarisha, a Puranic king of the solar line.

5. Drama.—Two Yakshagana works. These have been described in previous reports as being stories taken from the epic poems and adapted to performance on the native stage.

6. Fiction.—The most interesting work under this head is a Canarese translation of Guru Paramārtha, a satirical story written in Tamil by the missionary Beschi. It has been issued by the Roman Catholic Mission, together with a version in Canarese and English, and one in Canarese and Latin. The work was published some time ago in England as a drawing-room book, with humorous illustrations, under the title of Gooroo Simple and his disciples.

7. History.—Here is entered one of the local histories called Sthala purana, of which nearly every sacred place has one, relating the origin of its sanctity, and the annals of the neighbourhood composed mostly of legends and puranic stories. The present work is the Sthala purāna of Harihara, a celebrated town on the Tungabhadra, known in Military works as Huriyur. It is in Sanskrit, and has been edited by the Revd. T. Foulkes, F.R.S., M.R.A.S.

8. Language.—The principal publication is a re-issue of a useful work called the Hindustani Teacher, a hand-book for Europeans learning the language, compiled some years ago by Mr. Muhammad Ali, who is now Khan Bahadur and an Assistant Commissioner. Another useful work is in Canarese, being the selections in prose and poetry appointed for matriculation at the Madras University in 1878, edited, with notes, by Venkat Ramashastri.

9. Law.—Under this head have been placed two Hindustani versions of the Bangalore Municipal Bye-laws, one with an appendix.

10. Medicine.—The only work is a Canarese translation of a pamphlet in Tamil by Honorary Surgeon Jaganatham Nailu on the treatment of fever.

11. Miscellaneous.—Here has been included a Hindustani book on the art of cookery, designed for use in Girls' schools.

12. Poetry.—The only work is of slight importance. It is in Canarese, and called Jogi Haddu, being the song of Arjuna disguised as a jogi.

13. Philosophy.—A re-publication of Kaivalya Paddhati, or the Way of salvation.

14. Religion.—Of the religious works four are Muhammadan. The remainder are Hindu, principally hymns to either Vishnu or Siva called Bhakti Sāra, or praises composed of their thousand names, &c.

15. Natural Science.—Here has been entered Jataka Chandrike, a hand-book of Horoscopy, in Sanskrit and Canarese.

16. As stated in previous reports, it is difficult to distinguish what are original works from what are re-publications. But the classification has been made as accurate as the information available allowed.

ASSAM.

From S. O. B. RIDSDALE, Esq., C.S. Secretary to the Chief Commissioner of Assam, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department, No. 131G.R., dated Shillong, the 21st February 1878.

With reference to Government of India, Home Department Proceeding No.  $\frac{10}{707}$ , dated the 26th April 1875, I am directed to forward herewith a tabular statement analysing the publications registered in the Province of Assam during the year 1877 under the provisions of Act XXV of 1867.

2. Only 17 books were registered against 37 in the preceding year. Of the 17 books registered, 8 are educational, and 9 non-educational works, 15 are original works, and 2 are translations. The relative circulation of educational and non-educational works would appear to have been much the same, as of the former, 8,000 copies were printed, and of the latter 8,364, against 11,600 and 16,150, respectively, printed in the preceding year.

3. The books registered treat of the following subjects:— Biography, Poetry, Fiction, Religion, Language and Miscellaneous subjects.

4. The works are of little interest, and do not require any further comment; 13 are written in Bengali and 4 in Assamese.
